Seminar Detail:

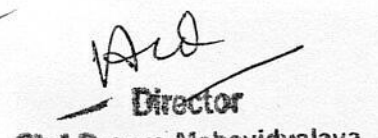

Shri Pragma Mahavidyalaya had conducted a Day Seminar on “legal challenges in E-commerce” on 10th October 2022.

E-commerce has exploded in popularity by offering convenience and competitive prices. However, the online marketplace does present some unique legal challenges. The article examines key laws impacting e-commerce operations, contractual considerations, privacy and security obligations, and Intellectual Property Rights – equipping entrepreneurs to take informed steps.

This abstract explores the legal challenges faced by businesses operating in the e-commerce sector, highlighting the complex regulatory landscape and emerging issues in digital commerce. E-commerce has transformed the way goods and services are bought and sold, offering unprecedented opportunities for businesses to reach global markets and consumers to access a wide array of products online. However, this digital revolution has also brought forth numerous legal challenges, including issues related to consumer protection, data privacy, intellectual property rights, taxation, and cross-border transactions. The abstract examines these challenges in detail, discussing the regulatory frameworks governing e-commerce activities at both national and international levels and the evolving nature of legal responses to emerging issues such as online piracy, counterfeit goods, and cyber fraud. Furthermore, it explores the role of technology in addressing some of these challenges, such as blockchain for supply chain transparency and encryption for data security. By understanding and addressing the legal challenges in e-commerce, policymakers can create an enabling environment for digital commerce to thrive while safeguarding the rights and interests of consumers and businesses alike.
